ESOMS TEACHER RECOGNIZED BY THE MINISTER OF EDUCATION AT CELEBRATION OF EXCELLENCE IN TEACHING

BARBARA HAMILTON is this year's recipient of the Teaching Excellence Award in Middle Years. The Minister of Education, Nancy Allan, presented this prestigious award to Barb at the legislature on Tuesday, April 17th.

As a former Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra musician, Barb offers exciting and diverse musical experiences to our students. Barb provides instruction in Band and Choir as well as fiddling instruction to 280 students in our school. Among other initiatives, she works with students to compose original music and to arrange contemporary pieces.

Barb and her students have created pieces of music that integrate traditional fiddling and hip-hop.

Barb has also been the school division's catalyst for developing the ever-growing divisional Fiddling Program in 8 of our 21 schools.

Moreover, Barb was a primary leader in initiating the implementation of the Sistema program in the Seven Oaks School Division, one of only four Sistema programs in Canada. Through this program, Mrs. Hamilton uses activities related to social justice and human rights to expose students to the power of using music to bring about social change. This is truly a profound achievement that will have a powerful and transformational effect on the lives of students in the Seven Oaks School Division.

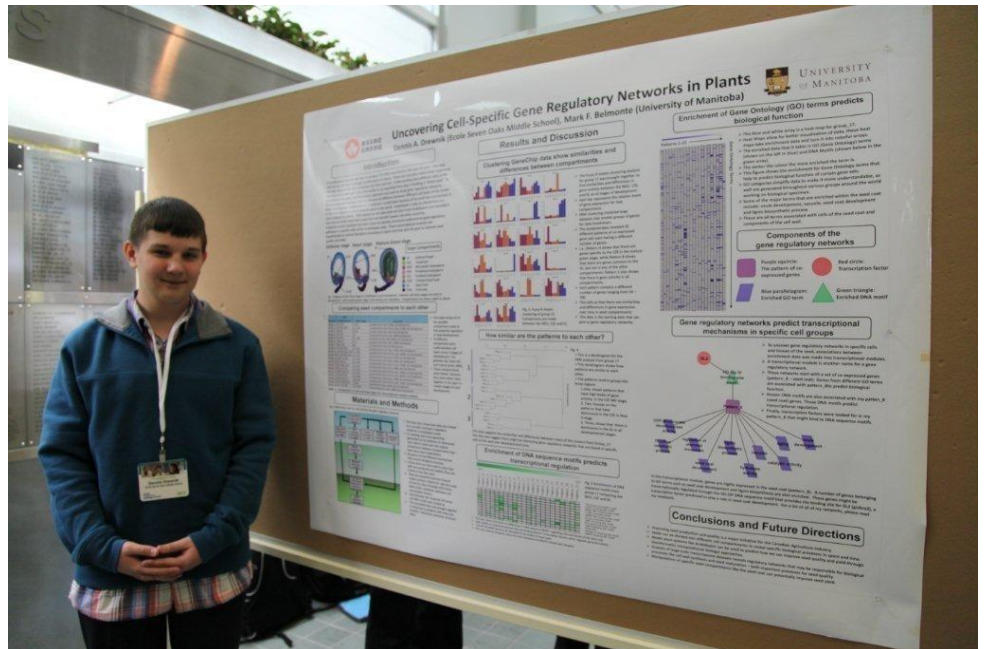

MY SCIENCE PROJECT:

UNCOVERING CELL-SPECIFIC GENE REGULATORY NETWORKS IN PLANTS TO IMPROVE SEED QUALITY AND SOLVE FOOD SHORTAGE PROBLEMS

Dennis Drewnik

I am a grade-eight student. I entered the SBCC (Sanofi BioGENEius Challenge Canada) competition 2012. The purpose of this research was to try and find gene regulatory networks in certain compartments/tissues across different stages of development of Arabidopsis (a plant related to the mustard family and similar to canola). If we find those networks we can start to manipulate the genes in those compartments to improve seed qualities. We want to improve seed qualities because there is a growing world-wide population, right now at 7 billion, and in the future there might be problems with food production which will lead to a shortage of food.

To find these networks, seed compartments were compared to each other from pre-existing genechip data (a GeneChip is an array that shows what genes are being expressed at certain time periods and the level of expression of those genes in the genome; in the genome of Arabidopsis there are 22 000 genes). This data was clustered at many levels using specific computer programs. I found that certain co-expressed genes in the seed coat had large levels of gene expression which suggests that there could be interesting gene regulatory networks.

Another computer program was used to enrich my data to find GO terms (a gene ontology term predicting biological function), DNA Sequence motifs (a binding site for a Transcription Factor), Metabolic Pathways as well as Transcription Factors (TFs bind to motifs and create certain biological processes needed for seed development and growth) which make up gene regulatory networks. Within the network I looked at Transcription Factor glabra2 (GL2), which was predicted to play a part in the seed coat. The seed coat helps to protect the seed and produces oils. But what would happen if we started to manipulate the genes that use GL2?

Research of this type can help with the world's food issues. At the competition I was competing against 28 different Gr.9 & Gr.10 projects from all across Manitoba. For all of my research and hard work I received the 3rd place award of $600, although the true award was being in the competition itself, expanding my knowledge and learning by doing hands-on research.

"gotta cut loose"

Everyone at ESOMS had the wonderful opportunity to really cut loose this year during our amazing production of Footloose. We successfully had 130 students working together both on and off the stage to put on a fantastic show. Students helped in areas such as set building, painting and moving, costume organizing, spotlights, acting, singing, and even stage managing. You name it, students were involved and it was fabulous!

We also braved that awful and strange stomach bug that plagued many of our cast and crew this year. Kudos to everyone who worked through the stomach bug to keep the show going and to take care of each other as well. Our students really stepped up to the plate when it came to looking out for each other.

Our parent volunteers were incredibly helpful during the show; we really couldn't have done this without everyone's support. Thank you! One last giant thank you to everyone involved for helping to make this year a great success. We are already looking forward to next year.

ESOMS FICTION PROJECT

Anjie and the Mysterious Crystal (Part 1)

Shae-Lynn

There once was a girl named Anjie who lived in an open field. She lived with her mom and her dad. She was an only child. She was very popular at school and her friend Lora always encouraged her to do great things.

One day Lora and Anjie were playing way out in the distance. Lora was running quite fast and tripped over a large sized bump on the ground. Over the large bump was a bunch of small, tiny and beautiful stones. Angie and Lora decided to dig and see what was under the bump. As they were digging, they came across a small black case.

Lora and Anjie opened the case and inside was a long necklace. The pendant was a small crystal. The crystal was green, was shaped like a cube and it looked like it was glowing. Lora and Anjie stared at the crystal for a long period of time.

"Don't you think we should return this crystal to its owner?" Lora said.

"Sure we will," said Anjie.

Lora and Anjie took it home for the time being. After a few hours Lora went home and Anjie went to bed. It started to get very windy outside. Anjie reached inside her night stand, pulled out the necklace and held it up to the moonlight pouring through her window. She thought she saw a star inside the crystal. All of a sudden, she saw a flash of light and then everything went dark around her. Back in her room, all that was left were her belongings and the moonlight pouring through her bedroom window.

Anjie woke up to the sound of water flowing. She opened her eyes and saw a beautiful blue sky. She knew she was not at home anymore. As she stood up, she saw a large lime coloured, shiny hill. She could not understand how she got to this place but she soon found out quickly because she looked on her neck and saw the necklace. It was now a medium green colour and she saw her bedroom in the middle of the crystal. Anjie knew that she had to find her way back home, somehow. The only problem was that she did not know how to get back. Anjie walked over to the beautiful blue lake and sat on the large stone. She sat there for hours wondering how she was going to find her way back home. Suddenly she saw a small figure run through the bushes. The leaves were rustling for a few seconds but then immediately stopped. Anjie got very scared but went to confront it anyway.

As Anjie drew closer to the bush, out came a young girl. She looked very strange because her eyes were bright green and her hair was midnight black with a purple and lime green streak in it. The girl wore a light blue dress that swayed every time she moved and it had gold and silver glitter all over the dress. She also wore pitch black gloves that covered the palm of her hands but not her fingers. These girl's shoes were long vines with beautiful silver and purple flowers. Anjie and the little girl just stared at each other surprised.

Finally Anjie spoke. "What is your name and who are you?"

"My name is Nala and I'm a witch," she replied.

Angie stared at her in disbelief. She had thought of many questions that would be just the right ones to ask a witch.

"I have never met a witch before," Anjie said.

"Really...where are you from?" Nala said

. "Well I don't know if you have heard about this place but I live in earth," Anjie replied.

"Where are you going?" Nala said.

"I'm trying to get back home," Anjie said.

"Do you need some help?" Nala asked.

"Sure...thanks," Anjie said.

Nala then showed Anjie the way to the mountains. Since Nala knew the land very well, they reached the mountains in no time.

As they stood at the entrance of the first cave, there was a strong gust of air that pushed them into the cave. They entered and could see nothing but a small light that seemed close but it was really far away. Every time they took a step, fluorescent lights appeared around them. It was like these lights were guiding them towards the small light in the distance. It also felt as if the walls were closing in on them.

The light in the distance turned out to be the exit. As they stepped out of the cave, they saw mountains and a rainbow. They heard birds chirping and a cool breeze rustling the grass.

Then Nala broke the silence, "Let's head towards the rainbow because it has a magic that just might take you home."

"Well then what are we waiting for?" Anjie said.

They traveled for weeks and the rainbow seemed to be getting further the closer they got. Anjie started to lose all hope.

Suddenly they saw dark clouds heading towards them. The rainbow started to lose all of its beautiful colours. It began to rain very hard. As the rain hit her necklace, it started to emit a blue light.

Perhaps, it does not like to get wet, Anjie thought.

"We must head into the cave off in the distance," Nala said.

They walked for hours and by the time they reached the cave both of them were soaking wet. When they entered, the rain had finally stopped.

"Shhh," Anjie said. "Do you hear that?"

"It sounds like someone is crying," Nala said.

Suddenly they saw a teenage girl dressed in bright fluorescent colours.

She was sitting on a stone crying. Nala and Anjie walked up to her.

"My rainbow has lost its beautiful colours...what will I do?!" she exclaimed.

"What is your name?" Nala inquired.

"I'm Galana, lady of the rainbow. I live on the rainbow and watch over it to make sure that nothing happens to it."

"Well how can someone take the magic out of your rainbow when you basically live on it?" Nala wondered.

"I'm not exactly sure."

"Maybe if we go to the mountains and find my sister, Loryn, we might be able to save my rainbow. There is only one problem...the forest is one of the most haunted places in all of the land."

"Are you sure that is the only way to find your sister – by going through the most haunted forest in all of the land?" Anjie asked.

"Yes, that is the only way." Galana insisted.

"Well then I guess we all should start heading to that really spooky forest...I hope that you are right." Anjie responded.

To Be Continued

THE HYDRA

Darius

Once in the 1900's, Chris and his family took a vacation to Greece. They went to the capital city, Athens.

Once they got there, they rented a hotel, went out for dinner, and then back to the hotel. There they fell asleep.

That night Chris had a strange dream. He dreamt that he was running away from something, but could not make out what it was. It was too dark to see anything except the trees and slopes around him.

He was running downhill with a mysterious monster chasing him.

He tripped, looked up and saw a scaly foot about to stomp on him. Chris moved out of the way and continued running.

Two streams of acid shot past his head and burned down a big oak tree right in front of Chris.

He was cornered, with this strange creature lumbering toward him. It raised something over its scaly body that looked like five butcher knives that had been joined together at the hilt and slashed down. Just before the knives hit his body, he woke up in a cold sweat.

Chris wondered, "What was that creature he saw?"

In the morning, Chris and his family took a hike on a mountain. They didn't know what the mountain was called but it seemed perfect for a long hike.

Soon they found a strange cave. What was strange about this cave was all around and inside it had thousands of golden coins the size of cookies called drachmas.

They were so amazed that they almost fell down.

"These coins could be worth thousands of dollars," Chris said, "let's take as much as we can and get out of here."

They filled their pockets and went down the mountain.

Half way down, they heard a loud screech. They looked behind them and to Chris's horror he saw the same creature from his dream.

This creature had 8 heads, with 8 mouths full of shark-like teeth. Leathery wings were folded on the sides of the creature. It had 5 claws that looked like butcher knives, feet that could crush you like a bug. When this creature screeched, scaly frills flew up on the back of creatures heads.

"Run!" Chris screamed.

The creature charged at them. Chris and his family ran like crazy. The creature spat acid and barely missed Chris's head. The acid hit an oak tree. They were cornered.

The creature tried to cut Chris down with its claws but Chris dodged it and the creature's claws got stuck in the tree.

Chris then took out his pocket knife and cut off the head of the creature.

Chris thought he had done a good job until the headless neck split in two and grew two fresh heads. By the time the creature was done it had nine heads.

One of the new heads tried to bite Chris, but he dodged it and it got his dad.

"NOOOOO!" Chris cried.

Chris and his mom ran around the tree. The creature started to fly toward Chris.

Just then Chris then realized that the creature wanted its gold back. So he dropped the drachmas and ran.

The creature dropped down and picked up the drachmas with its claws and flew back to its cave.

When Chris and his mom got to the bottom of the mountain, they saw a sign that said "Hydra Mountain."
